The 13th Mission
CBC1279
Digitized Video
48:44 min
J1 2004
The 13th Mission tells the true wartime story of the Lancaster bomber, the women who built it, the men who flew it, and the heroism and personal sacrifice endured on both sides of the Atlantic. In the spring of 1944 all of Europe was at war, and one million Canadians worked day and night to supply guns, tanks, ships and planes. One warplane in particular the four-engine Avro Lancaster bomber became a legend. Three teenaged women from rural Ontario turned their hands from farm chores and housework to shooting the rivets that held the Lancaster together. One week after D-Day, a crew of young Canadians set out on a fateful mission, flying from a British airfield through a storm of flak and night fighters to destroy Nazi supply lines in northern France. The women who build the bomber never met the men who flew it. Dedication, and the airplane itself were what they had in common. The 13th Mission is their story.

KPJ 2004
Viewers are transported to pioneer times in mid-America, where they see scenes from Lincoln's childhood in Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois. Lincoln also is seen as a young adult - as a shopkeeper, lawyer and politician. The program interweaves political and social conditions of nineteenth century America, including slavery, into its narrative content. It also discusses the Lincoln-Douglas debates. Lincoln's election to the Illinois legislature, his anti-slavery speeches and other activities there are covered. The program also shows his domestic life, taking viewers to his home in Springfield, IL. Extensive coverage is given to Lincoln and the Civil War. Lincoln's difficulty finding a field direction. When an older child is ready, he or she will go on a personal, spiritual quest alone in the wilderness. This usually lasts for a number of days while the child is tuned into the spirit world.

After Winter, Spring
77112 DVD
74 min JI 2013 Mcnabb/Connolly Films

In an era of rapid growth of mega-farms, the encroachment of suburbia and new European Union rules and reductions of agricultural subsidies, the farmers in the Périgord region of southwest France are forced to confront challenges that threaten the very existence of their small farms. Their story is recorded by one of their neighbors, an American filmmaker who grew up on her family's farm in Pennsylvania. Inter-weaving her story and theirs, the documentary explores the nature of the farming life and the rapid changes of the last two decades that have impacted the lives of families whose survival is tied to the land. The Périgordine farmers show us that as agriculture moves out of the hands of families who have farmed for generations and into a model of "agriculture as business," something fundamental shifts. This farming community caught between tradition and an uncertain future struggles to hold on not only to their farms but to a set of values that comes of their intimate relationship with the natural world. AFTER WINTER, SPRING reveals the human story of family farming at a turning point in history.

As Long As The Rivers Flow - Novel
Larry Loyie 76252 Book 2002
40 p.
As Long As The Rivers Flow. The author, Larry Loyie, is a Cree who grew up in northern Alberta in the 1940s, just before the destruction of native society through the assimilationist agenda of the residential schools. This book is his autobiography presented as a 3rd person story about Lawrence, a 16-year-old native boy. The story establishes some common ground with children everywhere. There is a pesky little sister, a peer group of cousins to best when picking berries or comparing pets, and the universal longing to grow up quickly and do adult things. But for the most part, this story is an earnest, serious effort to preserve in memory a very different time and place, to recover the values of a way of life and pass them on, because that life has been largely destroyed.

From a glimpse of the beautiful planet we inhabit, as seen by astronauts in outer space, this film moves in for a closer look at what we are doing to it. The film employs the multi-image technique to contrast scenes of natural grandeur—mountains, forests, and wildflowers filmed in Canada's national parks—with images such as the fouled rivers and despoiled countryside that result from the heedless exploitation of the natural environment. The challenge and the responsibility are plain for all to see. A film without words.

Between 1879 and 1986, upwards of 100,000 children in Canada were forcibly removed and placed into Indian Industrial Residential Schools. Their unique culture was stripped away to be replaced with a foreign European identity. Their family ties were cut, parents were forbidden to visit their children, and the children were prevented from returning home. First Nations children were the only children in Canadian History, to be singled out by race and forced to live in institutions; generation after generation. Tens of thousands of cases of sexual and physical abuses. The Government has assumed partial responsibility for this historical wrong and has agreed to pay out Billions in damages. They agree that the assimilation of First Nations children within these Industrial Schools was a terrible mistake. A mistake? The assimilation of First Nations wasnt a mistake; it was a plan.

Health
73368 DVD
45 min JIS 2003 National Film Board
Early campaigns to flight poverty and disease and help children grow up healthy led to the introduction of the school nurse, nose blowing drills and lice inspections. From open-air schools to confusing sex education classes.
Health was a part of the curriculum throughout the last century. This episode traces the rise of dental care, from early century programs in schools to dentists traveling epidemics and lengthy periods of quarantine. Home remedies were frightening enough to keep children from complaining about being ill. Over the course of the century we see the impact of public health care on children's lives.

I, Nuligak: an Inuvialuit History of First Contact
75364 DVD
70 min JIS 2006 Mcnabb/Connolly Films
Just over a century ago Herschel Island was a frontier boomtown, branded "the Sodom of the Arctic " by some visitors at the time. A place inhabited by whalers, Inuit, missionaries, and police; a place where worlds collided and lives were changed forever. It was on Herschel Island that a young Inuvialuit boy, Nuligak (later named Bob Cockney by the missionaries) came of age—fascinated by Herschel, but equally repelled by the excess of so-called civilization. Through Nuligak’s touching yet tragic life-story expressed through his writings and echoed by his grandchildren’s poignant return to the Island—we are offered a unique view into an often troubling past and a potentially hopeful future.

Marie Curie - The Radium Woman
77258 DVD 7 min JI 2014 Mcintyre Films
In 1867 Alfred Nobel patented dynamite and used his wealth to create the annual Nobel prize fund. That same year, Marie Skłodowska was born in Warsaw, Poland, and she later became the first woman to win a Nobel Prize. Because women could not attend the University of Warsaw, she attended classes in a secret Warsaw “floating university”. Later she enrolled in science at the Sorbonne in Paris. There physicist Pierre Curie offered her a job in his small lab, and they eventually married. Henri Becquerel’s discovery that some minerals emitted spontaneous radiation led Marie to experiment with radioactive pitchblende. The Curies discovered a new element, radioactive polonium, and Marie also isolated radium. They won the Nobel Prize for their research in radioactivity, and Marie later won a second Nobel Prize for the discovery of polonium and radium. Marie’s years of exposure to radiation led to her death of cancer in 1934.

Paddle to the Sea
NF10662 Digitized Video
28 min PJ 1966 National Film Board of Canada
For all children and those adults for whom the romance of journeying is still strong. This great NFB children’s classic is adapted from a story by Holling C. Holling. During the long winter night, an Indigenous boy sets out to carve a man and a canoe. He calls the man “Paddle to the Sea.” Then he sets the carving down on a frozen stream to await the coming of spring. The film charts the adventures that befall the canoe on its long odyssey from Lake Superior to the sea. This delightful story is photographed with great patience and an eye for the beauty of living things, offering vivid impressions of Canada’s varied landscape and waterways.

73385 DVD 46 min JIS 2003 National Film Board
Canada's biggest playground, winter, leads the way as we look at a century of play for Canadian kids. In the beginning you made your own gear and toys, but some store-bought things were irresistible. What Canadian girl, in her time, wouldn't want an Eaton's Beauty Doll or Barbara Ann Scott doll? And what boy, swept up in a cowboy craze, wouldn't die to have a Gene Autry gun or a Lash LaRue whip? Throughout the century, adults helped to organize clubs, camps and playgrounds—often with the intent of steering children away from trouble. In the end, getting away from adults and crossing forbidden borders have always been a part of the fun.

Growing up has become marked in school years but at the beginning of the 20th century most children attended primary school only. This bygone era is wonderfully evoked by still photos and archival film showing what children studied and where, from the one-room schoolhouse to a railway car. School in the 1940's and '50s is brought to life through interviews with adults who remember the first day at kindergarten, feared and loved teachers and encounters with the strap. The '60s and '70s brought television into the classroom and the concept of the open school which changed the actual building.

Sheena Azak of Canada: Children of Other Lands
L16697
14:36 min KPJ 1994 Learn360
The old and the new are portrayed with beauty and sensitivity in this intriguing profile of a 9-year-old Nisga’a Native Canadian. Sheena Azak lives with her family in Canyon City, a small, isolated village in British Columbia. Her father, chief of the Nisga’a Wolf Tribe, works long hours helping his children understand their rich cultural heritage. Sheena is shown with her family as they fish, camp, participate in tribal dances, and listen to elders as they pass down tribal wisdom embodied in the Nisga’a oral tradition. Sheena is shown in school in a nearby town. The program takes special care to show how Sheena’s life has been affected by people and technologies far from her small village. The program also takes careful note of mainstream Canadian culture for a realistic, well-rounded overview of life in Canada today.

Sisters in the Wilderness
CBC1278
87:06 min JI 2003
In England, they had been rising literary stars: educated, cultured and refined. They were hopelessly unprepared for life in the rough-and-tumble new colony, where it was a wrenching struggle simply to survive. And yet, despite illness and poverty, and at times near starvation, the two women never stopped writing, leaving an unparalleled record of life in early Canada. Their story is one of envy, ambition, passion, staggering hardship and unprecedented success. Adapted from the award-winning book by Charlotte Gray, “Sisters in the Wilderness” is a tale of perseverance and survival on the Canadian frontier.

Sailing 500 years before Columbus, the Vikings - or Norsemen - are credited with being the first Europeans to reach the New World. Join our two young hosts as they speak with Leif Erikson as he recounts the history of the Age of Vikings. Discover why the Vikings decided to leave their European homes in search of fertile lands, timber and adventure. Learn how the technology of their ships enabled them to voyage to new lands. Hear the tale of Erik the Red and his quest to settle a new colony in Greenland. Then listen as Erikson describes the Viking attempts to settle in Vinland, which many historians now believe to be in modern-day Newfoundland.

Western Expansion - The Last, Best West, Aboriginal Homeland
76623 Book 32 p. JI 2007
The Last, Best West - In the late 1800s, under the leadership of John A. Macdonald, Canada's first prime minister, Canada began expanding into the West. Macdonald's vision would have huge and lasting effects on Canada's geography and society. In Western Expansion, students will learn about the settlement of the Canadian West and the effect it had on the Aboriginal people living there. Aboriginal Homelands looks at the impact of the development of Western development since 1867, and how these agreements have influenced later treaty rights and land claims.

Work
73367 DVD 46 min JIS 2003 National Film Board
From working six days a week in a factory to serving up sundaes at the Dairy Queen on weekends, Canadian children have done it all. In the first half of the century many families couldn't get by without financial help from their kids. The nation counted on its young when it came to wartime; from joining to fight to tucking a love note in a scarf knit for an unknown soldier, witnesses recall their contributions. Recollections of work include cheapskate bosses, the decision to quit and the experience of getting fired. It was tough working in the coal mines and out in the fishing dories, but even babysitters join in the complaints about lousy conditions and low pay.
