In the mid-1800s the corporation won the status of a legal "person". Imbued with a "personality" of pure self-interest, the next 100 years saw its rise to dominance, made possible by a single-minded drive for profit. The corporation created unprecedented wealth, but at what cost? The remorseless rationale of "externalities" the effects of corporate activity on the physical world and people external to its responsible for countless cases of illness, death, poverty, pollution, exploitation and lies. After point-by-point analysis, "The Corporation" delivers a disturbing diagnosis: the institutional embodiment of laissez-faire capitalism fully meets the diagnostic criteria of a psychopath.

In the 1600s, the enclosure movement fenced public grazing lands so they could be privately owned. Today, every molecule on the planet is up for grabs. This is good for corporations that lack inherent limits on what, who, or how much they might exploit. Even disasters can be profitable. As the twin towers collapsed, gold traders doubled their clients money. A new target is very young children. The ad industry’s "Nag Factor" study shocked child psychiatrists when it exposed premeditated manipulation of not just kids, but infants. Corporations own the song "Happy Birthday"; patents on plants and animals; even your next disease. When they own everything, who will stand for the public good?

Power and the World's Women
77183 DVD
50 min IS 2015 Mcnabb/Connolly Films
This powerful documentary, featuring interviews with Hillary Clinton, Madeleine Albright and Condoleezza Rice, looks at the challenges of improving life for women around the world. Twenty years ago, while still First Lady, Hillary Clinton made a groundbreaking speech in Beijing, setting down a challenge to world leaders: to treat women's rights as human rights. She highlighted abuses including young girls sold into slavery; women raped as a tool of war; lack of education for girls. Since then, three women Madeleine Albright, Condoleezza Rice and of course Clinton herself have done one of the worlds most powerful jobs, as US Secretary of State. They all promised to put women's rights on the agenda, but what difference did they make and how much progress has been made? In candid interviews, these three former Secretaries of State talk about what its like being a woman at the centre of power, how they personally tried to change things and about the political challenges of improving the lives of women across the world. The film reveals the shocking extent of abuses in some developing countries and conflict zones and asks what Western politicians should and should not do to promote women's rights and equality. And as the US waits to hear if Hillary Clinton will make a second attempt at the US presidency, the film asks if America is ready to break the biggest glass ceiling of all and what a woman President of the USA could do for the worlds women?
